Dear Middlesex Community,

As promised, I'm writing to provide a quick Search update.

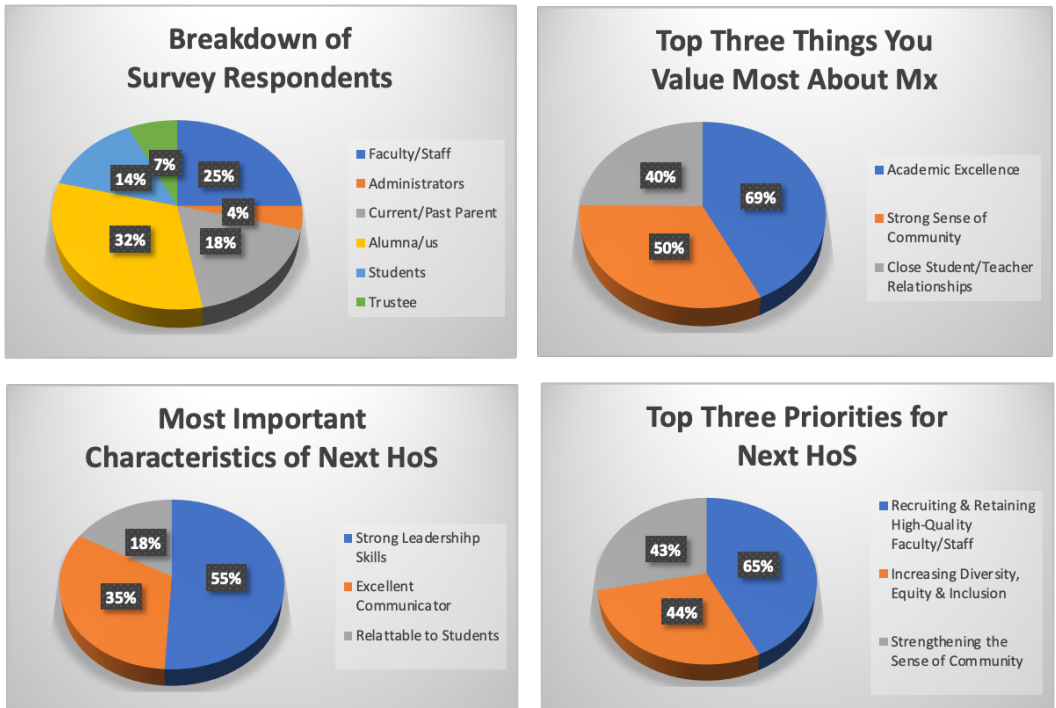

First, let me say thank you to those of you who completed the online survey or participated in the more than 20 Listening Sessions with our search consultants from Carney Sandoe & Associates. Your collective feedback has helped crystallize what we all love about Middlesex and has given the Search Committee clear direction as we enter the next phase of the search for our next Head of School.

We're excited to welcome the consultants to campus on March 25 for additional visits with students, faculty and staff.

Survey Participation & Results

We had strong survey participation from all segments of the Middlesex community – students, faculty & staff, alumni and current and past parents. While there were some differences across the groups, there was a great degree of consistency in your perspectives on what we value today and what we need to prioritize going forward.

Here's a brief snapshot of the data:

Based in part on your feedback, we have developed a position description which Carney Sandoe will share with prospective candidates. We believe that this document captures the essence of our school and what we are looking for in our next Head.

Over the last few weeks, the Carney Sandoe team has been busy conducting outreach calls to prospective candidates, and early indications are that there is strong interest in the position.

We will continue to update you throughout the process, but please don't hesitate to reach out to us at searchcommittee@mxschool.edu with any questions or comments.

Thanks,

Jason Robart
